SUBJECT: Money for Moscow Security

STAT

1. I called [redacted] OS Budget/CIA's Comptroller's office, at 1420 hrs 4 December and asked the status of our request for a review of the Budget to fund Moscow security needs. [redacted] said he was out of it, and that [redacted] had taken it on himself as a result of the meeting. [redacted] referred me to [redacted]

STATINTL

2. [redacted] said that he and some others had talked to Department of State Budget people. They found that Moscow security items are in the State Foreign Building Fund - associated with the Foreign Building Office and Program under State Department. The security items are not all represented but at this point it seems irrelevant because the OMS is "screwing around with funds for new U.S. Embassies for their own reasons." (Issue not otherwise described.)

STATINTL

[redacted] said there may be value to our interests because of this OMB concern. He did not say what they may be.

3. [redacted] said the next step was for [redacted] (CIA Comptroller's office) to meet again with State Budget people and then do a paper with options for [redacted] to send to [redacted]. In essence it will say that the CIA budget has been reviewed - as has the Contingency Fund - and there are no identifiable resources. (I assume there will be suggestions for alternative approaches based on what [redacted] learns from State and what OMB is doing with the Foreign Building Fund.)
